1.30pm-4.30pm
Edinburgh

Presented by Edinburgh College of Art & Moray House School of Education

A half-day workshop on canine-inspired multi-disciplinary drawing for primary and secondary teachers with an interest in Art and Design.

No drawing skills necessary.

This fun and informative workshop acts as a forum for teachers to practice and share drawing techniques. Attendees will be introduced to a selection of 'dog' models and their owners and set a series of drawing exercises as both individuals and as part of a group. The session closes with discussions and feedback from both participants and Edinburgh College of Art and Moray House School of Education staff. All work can be taken away and shared in the classroom. The workshop aims to inspire participants and is part of a larger programme to raise confidence and skills of both students and teachers.

All techniques can be transferred into a multitude of themes suitable for classroom teaching. Examples of classroom ideas suitable for primary and secondary will be exhibited.

Participants will;

- > learn easy hands-on techniques that can be developed back in the classroom;
- > experience drawing from life;
- > take away further ideas for developing Art themes with young people of all ages
