Your local pharmacy is the first place you should go for advice and treatment for many common winter illnesses including coughs, colds, sore throats and upset stomachs. If you run out of your usual medicines or dressings your pharmacist may also be able to arrange an urgent supply.

Pharmacists can also offer advice and free treatment for a number of different common conditions, such as urine infections, conjunctivitis, a number of skin complaints, skin infections and thrush without the need for a GP prescription as part of the national Pharmacy First scheme. More details can be found at www.nhsforthvalley.com/pharmacy
