Hygiene and safety It is important to store, prepare and cook food safely and hygienically. Choose a hygiene and safety activity to complete. Activity 1 Different foods need to be stored differently. Activity 2 There are hygiene and safety rules which need to be followed before, during and after cooking. Other suggested hygiene and safety activities can be found here.	The Eat Well Guide Watch the 'What is the Eat Well Guide?' video then explore the divided plate sorting PowerPoint. Divided plate sorting activity Cut out the different foods on the healthy plate template and sort them according to the food group you think it belongs in. The eating healthy plate is a great way to understand nutrition and what foods should be included on our plates to help us stay fit and healthy. Using Plan a healthy meal Using your knowledge of the Eat Well Guide, plan a healthy, balanced meal that includes all 5 food groups. Use the checklist to ensure you have included everything you need.	Bake-off STEM Baking has many connections to STEM. It allows you to put real-life concepts and STEM subjects into action. Yes, maths and science are whisked right into the fun without you even realising. Plus, getting to eat your work never hurts either! Share a photograph of something you have baked this week and reflect on all of the skills you have developed.  Egg drop investigation Eggs play an important role in baking, from cakes and cookies to meringues and pastry. They create structure and stability within a batter, they help thicken custard, they add moisture to cakes and they can even act as glue or glaze. This messy yet fun egg drop experiment is ideal for developing scientific language, investigating forces and discussing materials and their properties. Click here for instructions, a prompt card and a recording sheet for you to plan and carry out this investigation.	Fun ideas  Food quizzes Have a go at some of the tastiest, most delicious and food-tastic quizzes from all over CBBC.
