

Wherever you go in life, someone has been there before you; when you walk down the street, travel on a train, go to the shops, perhaps even sit on the couch in the house you live in....someone has walked on those same pavement slabs, or sat in the same train seat, shopped in the same shop, maybe even sat watching TV in your living room. Have you ever thought of that before? Strange, isn't it?

Do you ever wonder what sort of lives those other people led? Were they happy or sad? Were they successful people? Did they have children? Did they leave their mark on society?

Choose a person from the picture, either from the past or the present, and write their life story. Imagine what would be like to be that person. Can the reader look at this picture and identify the person you have written about?

