Why should you come to BookBug, well apart from the brilliant singing-

- Sharing stories helps your little one's development, language and social skills.
- Spending a few minutes reading together every day helps to build bonds and develop relationships.
- It can have a positive effect on emotional wellbeing for both children and families.

Mrs Abercrombie

Hi a h-uile duine,

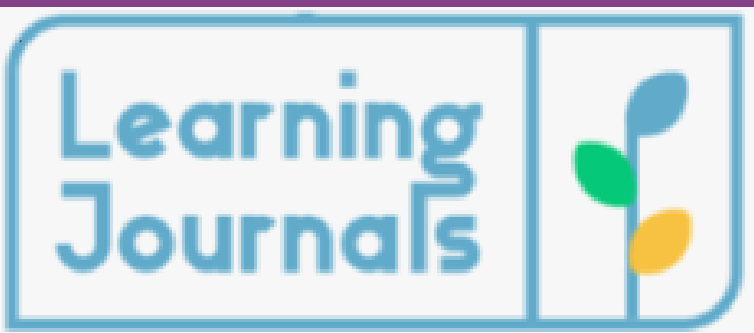

Our September newsletter has landed and what a month we have had...

I have especially enjoyed watching the children explore activities about the sea and in particular, jellyfish (what a beautiful display you have been making, with lots of glitter and shiny materials!).

I have also noticed lots of counting, number jobs and have been hearing lots of clapping out of syllables, well done.

We have also had a focus on playing safely outside, we are quickly becoming little risk/benefit assessment assessors!

Thanks also to Granny Gloria and Freddie's Papa for all the lovely fruit you have been donating from your gardens. I loved my plum jam on toast the other day and Gruffalo (apple) crumble.

Learning Journals.

This is where we will share all the happenings within the playroom. I know that some of you are new to them and we will try and help you along this fantastic digital resource.

Just so you know-

We will provide you with one observation a week, telling you all about your little one's learning. This observation will be published on a Monday @ 10am We will also fill you in with stories, giving you details of craic in the playroom.

Our Sgoil and sgoil-àraich values have been updated with the help of the staff, children and parents working collaboratively.

Play CORNER

Blocks help children learn to take turns and share materials, develop new friendships, become self-reliant, increase attention span, cooperate with others, and develop self-esteem. - Kathleen Harris. Development in all areas.

Blocks are very popular in the playroom, The children build tall towers, wee houses and tracks for the vehicles. We also use them for colour identification and size ordering and also most importantly for play.

A fantastic resource to have in your home!

Noticeboards.

Have a wee look at our two noticeboards - It gives you some useful information regarding what happens in the playroom and beyond. The other relates to all things communication, providing you with some child communication facts, some top tips and the Rhyme of the Month.

Go on, have a wee look x

Càfe cabadaich

On the 6th October @ 2pm there is the opportunity to come in and use the Gaelic you have learned with the student in Sgoil na Coille Nuaidh. This opportunity is open to the parents/carers of pre-school children.

Recipe Book

We were wondering if any of you lovely people would be willing to share your best/favourite recipes. We were hoping to build up a collection of beautiful and tasty dishes in a book. This could take us a wee while...but so worth it.

yum!
