

Wednesday 22nd April 2020

Today is Earth Day. It is celebrated on the 22nd of April every year and this year is its 50th birthday!

If you can find things in your garden or out on your walk which are lying on the ground (although it might not hurt to pick a few dandelions or daisies!) you could collect them and create little mini worlds or pictures using natural materials.

When I was out walking today I came across a lovely picture which someone had left for others to find....Can you see what it is?

I made something a little simpler with what I had in my collecting bag...

If you want to make a game out of them you could use them to play "Spot the Difference"

1.

2.

3.

4.

Have a go at making your own "Spot the Difference" game and use anything you like!

If you'd like more Earth Day ideas you'll find lots below:

<https://www.pinterest.co.uk/montessorimarnie/earth-day-activities-for-kids/>