

Fill up your week with these free fun art activities!

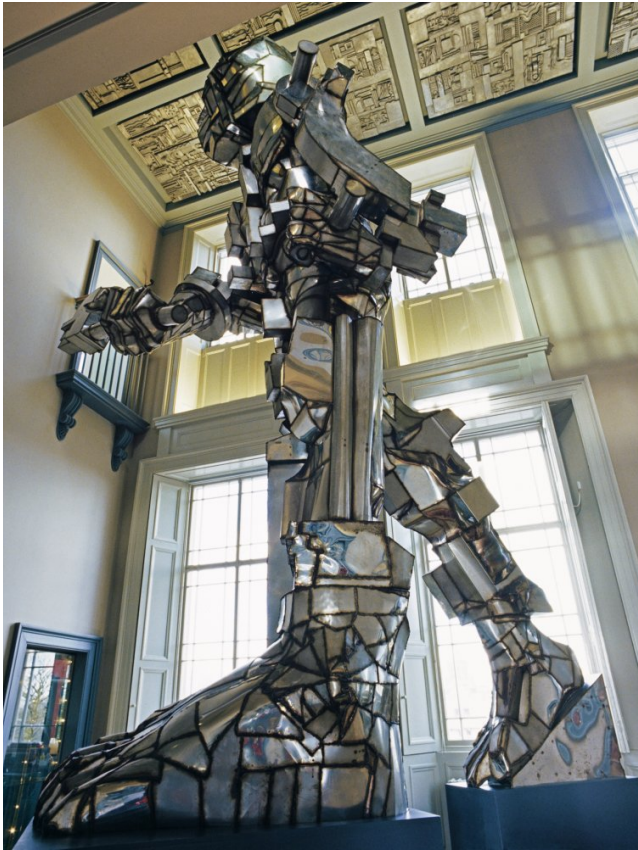

Every Monday, National Galleries of Scotland posts a new set of creative activities that have been designed for children of all ages to explore at their own pace. And, of course, grown-ups can join in too – especially with the mid-week #ArtTogether activities!

These wee taster activities require absolutely NO ART MATERIALS – just a little bit of imagination and a lot of creativity. They aim to develop creativity skills, such as problem solving, imagination, curiosity and open-mindedness. Please keep in mind that there are no wrong answers - this is all about looking, chatting, making and enjoying your time together at home!

Visit nationalgalleries.org to see the activities, artist videos, zoom in on artworks and more – or work your way through these PDF versions! We'd love to see the great art you make at home, and to hear how you're getting on so please share your photos on our Facebook page or by using #HomeArt on Twitter or Instagram!

Week one: Stand tall

The artist Eduardo Paolozzi created this giant sculpture Vulcan. Vulcan was the Roman God of fire and the blacksmith who made weapons for the gods and heroes. He is half-man, half-machine and stands over 7m high.

We challenge you to build your own Vulcan inspired by the shapes you see around you and by the objects you can find around the house.
