

Experiment With Apostrophes!

We can use apostrophes to show that something belongs to someone or something. When we use apostrophes like this, we call it possession. Circle the apostrophes that show possession in this text and then fill in the blanks.

The cat's eyes glittered in the darkness as the moon's silver light rippled over the cobblestones. Slowly, she began to walk towards the children, her paws completely soundless. She touched the hem of Angel's cloak with a single, sharp claw and hissed angrily. Ronan's voice echoed through the empty street. "What is it that you want?"

1. The eyes belong to .....
2. The light belongs to .....
3. The cloak belongs to .....
4. The voice belongs to .....

Now add apostrophes into this text to show possession. (There should be seven.) Remember... the apostrophe always comes just before the s!

Benji shot out of Mr Salamis shop, his short legs carrying him away at lightning speed. The little dogs teeth gripped the string of sausages tightly and he grinned a doggy grin as the angry butchers shouting grew fainter and fainter. He raced first through Annies garden, then Joes, then Edwards. At last he was home. Those sausages would make an unexpected surprise for his young masters birthday!

5. The shop belongs to .....
6. The teeth belong to .....
7. The shouting belongs to .....
8. The gardens belong to .....
9. The birthday belongs to .....

Apostrophes can be used for something else too. When we push two words together, like did and not, we can make a new word - didn't. We call this kind of word a contraction. A contraction is just one word made out of two words squashed together - but with some letters missing.

You might have noticed that when we made didn't, the o from did not disappeared! The apostrophe in any contraction is just there to show us that some letters have been taken away.

Can you make contractions out of the underlined words in these sentences? Let's see if you can put the apostrophes in the correct places too!

10. (What is) ..... the time?
11. I (have not) ..... done my homework yet.
12. (He will) ..... go mad when he sees all this mess!
13. I think (you have) ..... just sat on my cupcake.
14. Whatever you do, (do not) ..... spill that on her new carpet!
15. (Who is) ..... going to try out the swing (I have) ..... just built?
16. (I am) ..... thinking that, sadly, he (did not) ..... remember that sleeping dragons (do not) ..... like to be tickled.

Now it's time to challenge yourself! Some of the sentences below have apostrophes because of possession, but some of them have apostrophes because of contraction. See if you can underline the possessive ones in blue, and the contractions in green.

17. I don't know.
18. That isn't funny.
19. Where is the cat's basket?
20. I can't smell anything.
21. Put it in Danny's tray.
22. Then the teacher's handbag exploded!
23. What's the matter?
24. This rabbit's ears are quite floppy.
25. That is yesterday's newspaper.
26. It wasn't me!
