

Reading extract continued

money. Later Walt invented many other characters like Pluto, Donald Duck and Goofy.

In 1955 Disneyland opened in California. It was so popular that it had 30 million visitors in its first ten years. Then Walt started to build two new parks in Florida, Walt Disney World and Epcot. Sadly, he did not live to see these as he died in 1966.

The Disney Company has come up with many other ideas. It now owns other film companies and is the world's biggest publisher of books for children. In 1991 Disney made the world's first fully computer-animated film, 'Toy Story'. The company also owns a number of

