

The Story of our Library Enterprise Project

The Stages

- ⌘ We discussed what we wanted our library to look at feel like (adjectives).
- ⌘ We decided what theme we wanted to design and got into groups with people who wanted to do the same theme.
- ⌘ Design theme research – search engines like Google images.
- ⌘ We created a design plan for our theme (birds eye view and 3D design plan).
- ⌘ Planned our presentations – scripts.
- ⌘ Class conference – we did a presentation in our groups to try and 'sell' our design theme.
- ⌘ We did a vote – the Outer Space theme won.
- ⌘ We did online market research, using various websites – trying to find the cheapest of the items we liked – we listed the website where we found the item, an item description and the cost.
- ⌘ We started outer space themed art work – individual chalk art, space collage and space themed models.
- ⌘ We wrote a formal letter to Mrs MacDonald to explain what our enterprise project was about and to ask for money.
- ⌘ Our request for money was granted.
- ⌘ Two classes voted on the market research items.
- ⌘ We used the maths that we had learned and created tally charts and bar graphs to display the results of the vote – which showed which items were the most popular.
- ⌘ Items were purchased.
- ⌘ Unexpected set-back! Quiet room to be used as a storage room which put a stop to our Library Enterprise Project.
- ⌘ We discussed the problems we faced and planned a 'save our library' campaign.

- ⌘ Prepared scripts for our class conference with Mrs MacDonald – planning what we were going to say to her and how we were going to say it (we learned about persuasive and emotive language to help us do this).
- ⌘ We practised how we would speak to Mrs MacDonald in groups – hot-seating – and practised our debating skills to get our argument clear in our heads.
- ⌘ Planned petitions and worked cooperatively in groups to prepare our speeches to the classes to try to get them to support our cause.
- ⌘ Class conference with Mrs MacDonald.
- ⌘ Email from Mrs MacDonald with fantastic news! We felt...
- ⌘ Began planning our grand opening – event planning, dress code, invitations, special guest and speeches.
