What is stress?

Stress is normal but if we experience too much stress it can make life very difficult. Stress is invisible but in our fast paced modern world it is increasingly common to have too much stress. Enough stress helps us cope with the demands of our lives but too much stress can overwhelm us in a range of different ways. Stress affects our body, our mind, our emotions and our behaviour and if we study our own personal responses to too much stress we can learn to recognise when we need to do something about our stress levels. It can be really useful to ask those who know you best about your responses to too much stress. It is easier to spot stress in those around us than in ourselves.

Can we learn to control our levels of stress?

Absolutely.

Too much stress can lead to anxiety or depression or a combination of both so spotting stress early lets us act before it gets a grip.
