School update

As some of you may know we have had a couple of absences starting this term. We have been fortunate to have Jenny Irwin extend her time in orange class to cover for Fiona Morrison. As Jenny works in purple class on a Friday we will look for supply on Fridays until Christmas and they will be supported. In Green class Carol Duncan (our non-class contact teacher) has extended her time to support the majority of the week to cover for Judyann. Viv from John Fergus is supporting us with non-class contact cover and supporting green class on a Monday. We are so grateful for the support and to our families for their understanding. We wish our teachers well.

SIP progress

All staff have joined working groups to take forward aspects of our school improvement plan (school website for more information). This term we will be looking at play-based approaches at all levels and using significant observations to support assessment. On the Inservice day we will also be updating our diabetes training, and our teaching team will receive initial iPad training as part of transforming learning.

Cuppy and a blether/ parent forum

As this is a short term, we will combine these to one session on 18th November at 10 am. All welcome!

Fun stuff

What a super Halloween party we had last week. Thanks to all who supported.

Active schools are working with our sports ambassadors every Friday starting this week again and we are loving it.

Hear My Music have started again with us weekly every Thursday through to March! This project will involve Castlehill too and we are delighted.

As ever we will keep you posted about developments and always welcome ideas and suggestions to make Kilmaron the best it can be. Please do not hesitate to get in touch

Many thanks and happy Friday

Ruth Munro, Headteacher
