Introduction

Welcome to the Carers Trust Scotland Young Carers in Education Toolkit. It accompanies our Digital Education Hub for all staff in Scotland working with young carers in schools.

Young carers tell us, year on year, that education is one of the biggest challenges they face, and this is often exacerbated by teachers not understanding their caring role.

The Digital Education Hub is an online resource on Carers.org which is broken down by local authority. It has a range of resources such as school awards, lesson plans, presentations, e-modules as part of Professional Learning (PL), school charters and information on local young carer services to help you identify and support young carers in education.

There is also guidance, information and copies of Young Carer Statements.

Carers Trust Scotland

Carers Trust Scotland is part of Carers Trust, a major charity for, with and about carers. We work to improve support, services and recognition for anyone living with the challenges of caring, unpaid, for a family member or friend who is ill, frail, disabled or has mental health or addiction problems.

About carers in Scotland

There are at least 690,000 carers in Scotland and this includes 29,000 young carers under the age of 18 (Scottish Government, 2015). The value of unpaid care provided by carers in Scotland is £10,347,400,000 a year (University of Sheffield, University of Leeds and CIRCLE, 2015).

Three out of five of us will become carers at some stage in our lives in the UK (Carers UK, 2014) and one in ten of us is already fulfilling some sort of caring role (UK Census, 2011).

About young carers

At Carers Trust, our definition of a young carer is someone under 18 who helps look after someone in their family, or a friend, who is ill, disabled or misuses drugs or alcohol.

Some young carers look after more than one person and may have health issues of their own.

Some young carers start giving care at a very young age and some are not aware they are carers. Other young people become carers overnight due to sudden illness or injury.

Young carers can have many different roles and responsibilities that can include but are not restricted to:

- Practical tasks, such as cooking, housework and shopping.
- Physical care, such as helping someone out of bed.
- Emotional support, such as talking to someone who is distressed.
- Personal care, such as helping someone dress.
- Managing the family budget and collecting prescriptions.
- Helping to give medicine.
- Helping someone communicate.
- Looking after brothers and sisters.

“ I struggle to complete homework and on bad days I can't leave the person I care for so it impacts my education significantly. ”

“ Mum has migraines and sometimes blacks out. She has to go to bed and sleep. I get her drinks and tablets. I make my own food. I don't want to leave her alone when she is ill. ”

Why are many young carers hidden?

The condition of the person I care for is not obvious so people don't think that I need any help.

I didn't realise I was a carer or that my life is different to that of my peers.

I don't want to be any different from my peers so I don't draw attention to my caring role.

I want to keep my identity at school/college separate from my caring role.

It's not the sort of thing I feel I can discuss with my friends.

There has been no opportunity to share my story.

I am worried about bullying.

I worry that my family will be split up and that I'll be taken into care.

I worry that social work will get involved.

I want to keep caring a secret.

I'm embarrassed.

“ My younger siblings have additional needs. This means it is hard to study at home. I am often very tired as my sister is awake a lot at night and we share a room. ”

Young carer, 15

“ I feel like my teachers should understand more about my caring role. ”

Possible indicators that someone is a young carer

A young carer might show all, some, or none of these signs.

- Often late or missing days or weeks off school for no reason.
- Often tired, anxious or withdrawn.
- Often checking their phone or asking to call home.
- Finding it difficult to concentrate on their work.
- Having difficulty joining in extra-curricular activities or unable to attend school trips.
- Not handing in homework/coursework on time, or completing it late and to a low standard.
- Anxious or concerned about an ill or disabled relative.
- Secretive about home life.

I have a pupil support teacher but it's hard because he's always really busy and doesn't really have the time to have a talk.

Carers (Scotland) Act 2016

In April 2018, the Scottish Government launched the Carers (Scotland) Act 2016. Under the Carers (Scotland) Act the definition of a young carer is anyone aged 18 and under, or 18 and still in school, who provides, or intends to provide care. The key duty in the Act is that carers who meet local eligibility criteria must be provided with support to meet their identified needs. When carers do not meet eligibility criteria for support, local authorities must set out how they will meet those needs.

Under the Carers (Scotland) Act 2016, all young carers in Scotland have the right to a Young Carer Statement. If you identify a young carer in your class, or school, you should inform them about the opportunity to have a Young Carer Statement. This statement will detail any support needs the young carer may need. Your local authority will be able to tell you who is leading on Young Carer Statements for your area.

“ I miss school a lot I worry about mum and can't think in class. ”

Young Carer Statement

The Young Carer Statement:

- Helps to understand about the caring tasks a young carer does.
- Details how often a young carer does these tasks.
- Informs about the effect this has on their schoolwork and overall wellbeing.
- Gives opportunity for a young carer to talk about the things they like and would like to do. For example attending clubs or taking part in sports.
- Looks at emergency and future planning.
- Gives a review date for the statement.
- Informs whether the young carer meets local authority criteria for support and how much support they are entitled to.

There is a duty on the local authority to offer a Young Carer Statement, however, the young carer does not have to accept this offer and should still be able to access information and limited support if they refuse. If a young carer initially declines the offer of a statement they can ask for one at a future date.

Each local authority has developed their own version of the Young Carer Statement and you can view these on the Digital Education Hub.

The Census identified 6.5 million carers in the UK. However, we know from research that young carers are vastly under identified by the census. Carers Trust believes it is important to recognise young carers as they are too often invisible. We therefore use an estimate of in the region of seven million.
