

Creative Conversations

Edinburgh's Creative Learning Network, 20 12/13

Date	Creative Catalysts	Biography/about	Time	venue
Thursday 31st January 2013	Sir Tim Brighouse and David Cameron  Welcome by Mike Rosendale Head of Service Schools and Communities	Let's Get It On..... Improving schools and encouraging creativity is not something anyone can do on their own. It needs to be a joint effort involving partnership, commitment and shared purpose and that has been how Professor Tim Brighouse has worked throughout his career. He has one of the most remarkable track records in education throughout which runs a commitment to creativity in every sense. At a recent conference he was described as setting out a vision for education based on inspiration and trust, presenting it in the language of literature and poetry. The speaker who followed him was accused of setting out a vision based on threat and exposure delivered in the language of Orwellian doublespeak. This is an opportunity to engage with Tim Brighouse in a conversation about how we empower teachers and educators to be creative in what they do. We will also discuss how we get the best outcomes for young people without compromising the quality of education and experience. Tim will bring wisdom, experience, curiosity and interest - come and join in!	4.00 for 4.30 4.30 – 5.30 5.30 onwards for wine and canapes	Venue to be confirmed with your email confirming your place