

Friendships

Making new friends

Introduction

When making a new friend, it is good to start by saying hello and telling the person your name. They might tell you their name. If they don't, you can ask them.

hello

My name is

What is your name?

Asking Questions

It is good to ask questions. It is important to ask one question then wait for an answer. We have to use lots of skills to make a new friend. We have to take turns talking, listening, waiting, asking questions and responding to answers.

respond appropriately

closed questions

Closed questions can be good to get quick answers and find out if you have shared interests. These are questions that have yes/no answers.

Do you have _____?

Do you like...?

Are you...?

pets

games

going on holiday

siblings

sports

happy

why ...?

what...?

how...?

open question

Open questions are good because it gives us more information. The person can talk for longer and can give us more details about what they are talking about or interested in.

why do you like...?

do you like?

are you feeling?

why is this your favourite?

sport

do you do that?

How to end a conversation.

When making a new friend, it takes time. When the conversation has finished, it is important to let the person know the conversation is finishing but you would like to talk to them again.

I have enjoyed talking to you.

Thank you. I look forward to talking again soon.

bye
