

Personal Space

This is an invisible boundary that we have around ourselves.

This is the space we feel comfortable and belongs to us.

It is usually about an arm's length but can be based on personal preference.

Moving into someone's personal space can be intimidating or frightening.

If we are invited into someone's personal space, we have to respect them.

We have to recognise that being allowed in someone's personal space can be changed.

Respecting personal space is important in building positive relationships and feeling safe.
