DIRECTORY OF AWARDS

A Directory of Awards in table form, this alphabetical listing summarises at a glance the key features of awards listed, including age range, award programme components, SCQF level and accreditation.

“ We want each child to enjoy an education that encourages them to be the best they can be. This is an investment that impacts on individuals, families and communities.”

Improving the education and life chances of our children and young people is the defining mission of this Government. Our vision is of excellence and equity for all children and young people across Scottish education. We value the significant contribution that Community Learning and Development services, including youth work organisations, make to the progress and achievement of children in Scotland and we want to see this continue to expand.

The Scottish Government continues to support the youth work sector and one of the key ambitions of the National Youth Work Strategy is,

“A strong, responsive and imaginative youth work sector that supports and empowers young people is vital in our drive to improve their wellbeing and life chances.” National Youth Work Strategy 2014-2019

This is where the Awards Network—and this updated publication—plays such an important role. It is also good to see how this work, including the previous versions of Amazing Things, has influenced the development of other awards such as the Adult Achievement and Community Achievement Awards.

Recognising softer skills learned and practiced—often in non-formal as well as formal settings—is an effective way to demonstrate the skills employers look for. Raising attainment through the recognition of both soft and harder skills will support Scotland’s young people to become confident individuals and contributing citizens. Through the Scottish Attainment Challenge, the Scottish Government is working to achieve this. We are investing to raise attainment, to drive forward improvements on educational outcomes in Scotland’s most disadvantaged communities. We want each child to enjoy an education that encourages them to be the best they can be. This is an investment that impacts on individuals, families and communities.

I am ambitious for Scotland and for Scotland’s young people and these awards contribute to building a successful Scotland. I would urge you to make best use of them and support our young people to flourish.

John Swinney MSP,

Deputy First Minister
and Cabinet Secretary for Education and Skills

Foreword— Graeme Logan

“ We have a collective responsibility to our young people, and we need the collective will to make things better—to improve life chances for people of all ages, through learning, personal development and active citizenship.”

I would like to congratulate the Awards Network, and your growing membership, in your work to continue to develop and expand / extend these important awards. I am delighted to see that increasing numbers of young people are achieving youth awards—more than 80,000 in 2016–17—and awards are being delivered by local authorities and the third sector in an ever widening range of settings.

At the heart of our ambition for young people is the principle that everyone in Scotland has the right to access high quality learning to meet their needs and aspirations, not only in their school years, but throughout their lives.

We have a collective responsibility to our young people, and we need the collective will to make things better—to improve life chances for people of all ages, through learning, personal development and active citizenship. These awards absolutely support these responsibilities.

In the recent Education Governance Review consultation, children and young people told us that they want their schools and teachers to realise the value of extra-curricular achievements in their education. Youth awards are a great way to achieve this.

So, I would encourage everyone who works with young people—in schools, youth work settings, further education or in the workplace to make best use of this excellent resource.

Graeme Logan,
Interim Chief Inspector of Education,
Education Scotland

Foreword—Hugh Aitken CBE

“ Young people are the employees, entrepreneurs and business leaders of the future—it’s their ideas and hard work that will power future prosperity in Scotland.”

While formal qualifications remain hugely important, employers tell us time and again that attitude and aptitude are the most important thing they look for when it comes to hiring school and college leavers. Ensuring that young people, whether still in education or already in the workforce, get exposure to community and volunteering opportunities and other non-formal learning through youth awards is great for their all-round development and the new skills and experience they gain along the way can be a real boost to employers, current and future.

From an employers’ perspective, seeing young people take on these challenges is indicative of a positive, can-do, attitude—exactly what we want to see in the workforce. Being successful in a modern economy isn’t just about having the skills and experience necessary to do your job well, it’s about combining these attributes with the ‘soft skills’ that can take you further. Volunteering opportunities and becoming an active and engaged member of the community can be a really helpful way of teaching young people the communication, leadership and teamwork skills that businesses prize. It can also help them gain the confidence, resilience, enterprise, adaptability and ambition that will help them navigate an ever-changing jobs market.

We’re very pleased to once again lend our support to this publication. Amazing Things is an essential guide to all the fantastic youth award schemes that take place here in Scotland. Better showcasing the links between youth awards, volunteering opportunities and the business community is a hugely worthwhile endeavour. Amazing Things is an important first port of call for those searching for further information on the issue.

Young people are the employees, entrepreneurs and business leaders of the future—it’s their ideas and hard work that will power future prosperity in Scotland. Ensuring that their personal endeavour, commitment and contribution to local communities is rewarded through real recognition will only encourage them to think bigger and we should do everything we can to make sure that awards of this nature are suitably highlighted.

As the voice of business in Scotland, we wish all award achievers well and offer our thanks and support to all young people up and down Scotland that are involved in youth award and community volunteering programmes—you make a hugely important contribution and it doesn’t go unnoticed.

CBI Scotland Director

WELCOME TO THE 4TH EDITION OF AMAZING THINGS, THE GUIDE TO YOUTH AWARDS IN SCOTLAND.

Produced by the Awards Network, Amazing Things highlights opportunities and potential of youth awards to support and recognise the achievements of young people. Contributions from Government, education and employers demonstrate growing recognition of the role and value of youth awards to development of life skills and learner journeys towards further learning and employment. The impact of youth awards is ably illustrated through stories and views from young people.

Amazing Things lists key features of a range of youth awards provided by members of the Awards Network. The Awards Network was established in Scotland in 2008 as a forum of providers of non-formal learning opportunities for young people, recognised by youth work awards. Its members work together to raise awareness of the range and impact of awards accrediting learning and achievements of young people aged 10–25. It recognises awards that use youth work approaches and are available throughout Scotland.

Since first published in 2008, Amazing Things has helped to foster greater recognition amongst educationalists, employers and young people themselves, of the value of youth work awards and their wider impact on young people's learning, skills and personal development.

The awards listed include top awards of Awards Network member organisations as appropriate, but it is by no means a comprehensive guide. It is only possible here to list some of a much wider range of awards that can be achieved through their award programmes. Awards provider website and contact details are listed in the Directory of Awards Network Members.

The guide is aimed at everyone who places a value on young people's voluntary effort to develop their own skills and improve the communities around them.

Schools will be able to see how young people's extra-curricular activities complement formal learning and recognise the potential for youth awards to support attainment and achievement.

Colleges and universities will be able to recognise the importance of a wide range of prior learning, and also offer opportunities for students to develop skills and competence alongside their studies.

Employers will be able to better recognise youth awards and understand the way in which young people's non-formal learning and community activities build up their 'soft skills', and make them more effective employees in the workplace.

Youth organisations will be able to identify ways of recognising and accrediting young people's volunteering, achievement and self-development.

Young people can explore opportunities to harness youth awards to shape their own learner journey and gain recognition and accreditation for their achievements.

More information and supporting resources can be found by visiting the Awards Network's website—www.awardsnetwork.org. The site includes a searchable awards database and will be regularly updated with information on new members and awards.

Why Recognise Young People's Achievements?

The youth work sector has long recognised the power and positive impact of youth work and related award programmes. #youthworkchangeslives is a statement of fact, not an aspiration.

Traditionally youth awards were seen as something that happened beyond the school gate, with limited, if any, links to formal education. Curriculum for Excellence has challenged that, with innovative partnerships between school staffs and youth work practitioners helping to break down barriers between formal and non-formal learning, contributing in particular to personal development and preparedness for post-school learning, work and life.

Educationalists agree that 'All children and young people are entitled to have the full range of their achievements recognised' (Building the Curriculum 5: a framework for assessment, Scottish Government, 2010). Whilst extra-curricular non-formal learning achievements of young people have for many years been recognised and celebrated through youth work, increasingly youth awards form important elements of learner pathways in schools and colleges, with achievement being a key 'improvement' measure.

Young people are quite clear that it's not just school-led activity that should be recognised. The 2017 Education Governance: Next Steps report noted that 'children and young people have said that they want their schools and teachers to realise the value of extra-curricular achievements in their education'. There is a growing opportunity for young people's community activities to be both a support to, and an expression of, their school based learning.

The significance of young people's community based activity is evidenced in the IPSOS National Youth Social Action Survey 2016 which records 52% of young people aged 10–20 in Scotland being engaged in meaningful social action—the highest rate across the UK. While many young people are content to volunteer without receiving any formal accreditation, a growing number see its value. For them, the possibility of using their volunteering experience as a way of strengthening their CV and enhancing their education progression and career prospects is a real incentive.

Employers place a high value on the employability skills that youth awards help young people to develop. Study on the impact of Non-Formal Education in youth organisations on young people's employability, European Youth Forum; by Bath University / GHK Consulting noted that 'Of the top 6 skills and competences most often mentioned as demanded by employers, five are also amongst those developed to a high extent through involvement in youth organisations—communication skills, decision-making skills, team-working skills, self-confidence and organisational / planning skills'.

Writing in the April 2017 edition of The Link (YouthLink Scotland), Jamie Hepburn MSP, Minister for Employability and Training noted the important role of youth work in creating opportunities for 'young people to develop skills that employers are calling out for: confidence, leadership and negotiation skills, learning to solve problems and to work well with one another'.

The relative value of such skills is highlighted by the 2017 CBI / Pearson Education and Skills Survey: 'By far the most important factor employers consider when recruiting school and college leavers is their attitude to work (86%), followed by their aptitude for work (63%) and general academic ability (43%)'.

Be Awards Aware

Whilst there is clearly a commitment at the highest levels to recognise and value the achievements gained by young people through youth awards, such recognition remains insufficiently widespread. The Review of Youth Awards (Education Scotland 2015) noted that 'A lack of detailed knowledge and awareness of the full range of awards available, particularly in schools, is leading to missed opportunities.'

Awards Aware is a scheme developed by the Awards Network to generate greater knowledge and understanding of youth awards and to encourage practice that recognises and celebrates achievement.

Sign-up to Awards Aware at — www.awardnetwork.org/awardsaware and make a commitment today to recognise the achievements of young people and reflect this in your own and your organisation's practice.

HOW YOUTH AWARDS CONTRIBUTE TO CURRICULUM FOR EXCELLENCE, THE SCOTTISH ATTAINMENT CHALLENGE AND DEVELOPING THE YOUNG WORKFORCE.

‘A Review of Youth Awards in Scotland’ published by Education Scotland in 2015, described the establishing of the Awards Network in 2008 as ‘a timely and creative response to curriculum for excellence... demonstrating a high level of public policy innovation emerging from the first national youth work strategy.’

The Review recorded that:

- Young people gain a wide range of skills such as confidence, interpersonal, team working, leadership and employability through participation in youth awards
- Youth awards support young people in their learning and to progress to further and higher education, training and employment on leaving school
- For some young people facing additional challenges participation in youth awards is life changing

Curriculum for Excellence

Curriculum for Excellence (CfE) is an approach that supports young people as they learn and develop the four capacities: successful learners; confident individuals; responsible citizens; and effective contributors. Encompassing the totality of planned learning of young people aged 3–18—formal and non-formal, within and outside the classroom—CfE provides a policy context in which the approaches and programmes of the youth work sector have gained wider currency and recognition. The ‘four capacities’ of CfE are at the heart of what youth work does.

The youth work approach exemplified by youth awards, is outlined in the Statement on the Nature and Purpose of Youth Work (YouthLink Scotland 2009). It aligns closely with the commitment in CfE to personalisation, choice and progression. Youth awards are about voluntary participation. Young people take control of their own learning. Many youth awards actively involve young people in the assessment of their own learning and in recognising their achievements through dialogue and record-keeping in portfolios and journals. Self-assessment, peer assessment, personal learning planning and portfolios are recognised reporting methods within CfE—all of these are key to award assessment processes.

Scottish Attainment Challenge

John Swinney MSP, Deputy First Minister and Cabinet Secretary for Education and Skills, highlights the role of youth work in closing the attainment gap: ‘Youth work also has a role to play in transferring good practice in informal and community learning approaches into schools to help close the attainment gap between children from the most and least deprived communities. And as a partner in Developing Scotland’s Young Workforce, youth work can help to increase the range of pathways available to young people to further learning, training and skills development’. (Beyond the classroom: youth work and attainment—YouthLink Scotland Blog, 1 November 2016)

Leading the Attainment Challenge at Education Scotland, Graeme Logan notes: “Increasingly, we are seeing youth workers work alongside teachers and others who support children and young people, and the (youth work) sector has a key role to play in helping us to achieve our vision of excellence and equity for every child and young person... Youth workers often connect with young people in a way that makes a tremendous difference to confidence and self-esteem as well as to knowledge and skills.” (YouthLink Scotland Blog, 20 December 2016)

Offering different learning pathways, youth work awards can address perceived barriers to learning and achievement. The range of awards available provides significant opportunities to broaden learning experiences within schools and community settings.

Developing the Young Workforce

‘Our education system, along with the range of employability and training opportunities provided across the country, must ensure that all of our people are equipped with the skill sets and attributes to successfully take part in our changing and evolving economy.’ (Scotland’s Labour Market Strategy, The Scottish Government, August 2016)

Youth awards provide a framework for young people to develop leadership skills and take on leadership roles, work as a team, explore new peer groups and environments, develop organisational abilities and develop and exercise a range of communication skills. Often referred to as ‘soft skills’, these are the very skills that employers prize.

Sarah Griffiths, Senior Policy Officer, DYW Employer Engagement Team, Scottish Government writes:

The Scottish Government’s Youth Employment Strategy – Developing the Young Workforce encourages young people to take up a variety of pathways to broaden their skills and experience of the world of work. Youth Awards promote an important route through which young people have the opportunity to work towards a recognised accreditation that they can use to demonstrate their skills and achievements to employers and open up further options for their learning journey.

We know that the transition from education and work is an important phase in the life of a young person. With the Developing the Young Workforce Programme, the Scottish Government want to make sure that every young person has the right advice and the information that they need to make informed decisions about what they want to do. The Youth Awards are a good example of the different ways that young people are gaining the experience they need to make the right choices for their future.

“ Youth Awards promote an important route through which young people have the opportunity to work towards a recognised accreditation that they can use to demonstrate their skills and achievements to employers and open up further options for their learning journey.”

YOUTH AWARDS—FROM CURRICULUM ENHANCEMENTS TO FUNDAMENTAL BUILDING BLOCKS

There is much within the Scottish education system, and particularly within individual schools, of which we can be justifiably proud. It is, however, in a constantly and rapidly changing world, vital that in the education of Scotland's young people, we have an education system which is able both to look inward and be evaluative and critical, while at the same time look outward, and seek the support of willing partners to enhance and develop existing good practice.

Schools have grown to realise that the paths which young people pursue through learning are complex and variable, with multiple points of exit and transition to further learning. Schools have increasingly bought into the concept of learning journey and realised that they have an obligation to individual children to offer and support a learning experience which matches their interests, aptitudes and career aspirations. The challenge of delivering such an individualised experience at school and system level, particularly in a time of austerity and scarcity of resources, cannot be underestimated. Nor, however, can this be used as an excuse not to think imaginatively, or act boldly in the best interests of young people.

Schools have grown to understand the critical importance of living within, drawing from and contributing to their community in the search for learning resources and activities which not only will stimulate but will also contribute to and have relevance within a widely varied curricular provision. In this context youth award activities are moving from being enhancements to the curriculum to being fundamental building blocks within it.

Amongst the top ten skills identified in 2016 by the World Economic Forum as being required by the workplace of 2020, are people management, coordinating with others, service orientation and critical thinking. Schools having recognised and acknowledged this, are pro-actively seeking partners with expertise, with whom to work in the delivery of such skills in their curriculum. The importance of youth awards to the delivery of a broad, relevant and stimulating curriculum is both obvious and critically important to school leaders. The positive impact which can be gained by young people in the development of such skills through engagement in youth award activities cannot be underestimated. The promotion and recognition of the contribution of wider achievement in a young person's formative development and personal effectiveness is a powerful lever in unlocking potential and in promoting the value of lifelong learning.

The challenge now facing schools and the education system in relation to youth awards is twofold:

- to continue to develop the flexibility of curricular provision to enable the learning experience on offer to better meet the need of each individual child at the appropriate stage on his / her learning
- to find ways of ensuring that all of the learning experiences on offer are recognised as valuable, and afforded due value, by all in society

The national gains to be made through growing a society and an education system which promote the relevance of all learning, and develop a love of learning through such an approach to enhancing the life chances of individual young people cannot be overemphasised.

Jim Thewliss,
General Secretary,
School Leaders Scotland

STUART'S JOURNEY— HOW YOUTH AWARDS SHAPED MY CAREER

At 17 years old I was volunteering at my local youth clubs. I was still at school and enjoyed going to the clubs as it gave me something fun to do in the evenings and weekends. I achieved a Dynamic Youth Award and took part in games training. It was then suggested that I would be able to complete a Platinum Youth Achievement Award (YAA).

After I completed the YAA, I was able to plan, deliver and evaluate a fun and appropriate session, no matter the group, which is something I wasn't able to do at the start of my award.

While completing my YAA, I began to see how much I enjoyed volunteering with young people and realised that I would love to have a career in Youth Work. I began to evaluate where I stood in terms of achieving this, and identified which training would help me gain the skills I needed to get a job. I followed my YAA by completing a PDA in Youth Work, to give me a national qualification that I could use to help me get my dream job. A few months later I applied to become a Youth Work Trainee and I was delighted to get the position.

I am now a Project Coordinator for Youth 1st, a job which I had identified in my planning stage of my Platinum YAA as a future goal. I feel very fortunate to have been given the opportunity to gain my Platinum YAA. It helped me to grow as a person, gaining confidence and life skills I would never had achieved otherwise. More importantly, it showed me that I wanted a career in Youth Work and was the starting point in me achieving this. It has led to me gaining a variety of qualifications that have allowed me to get my current job and to be able to pass on my skills and experiences to other young people. I am able to show them that there are opportunities out there for everyone, and that by taking part in awards and training they too can achieve anything.

STEPHANIE'S BLOG— A LIFE-CHANGING CHALLENGE

We often associate learning with a classroom. Whenever we think of learning we picture a school. However, learning goes way beyond this; people are capable of learning and growing as an individual out with an enclosed environment.

The Outward Bound Trust is a prime example of this — they allow young people the chance to learn in an environment that is like no other.

This summer I took part in the Outward Bound Skills for Life Award at The Trust's Loch Eil Centre and it was by far the best experience of my life. Skills for Life taught me many things over the course of 19 days. Some of them were obvious physical achievements and abilities. I learned how to canoe, navigate using a map and compass, how to survive in the wilderness and I even climbed to the summit of Ben Nevis. These achievements were phenomenal for me.

However, there were also many mindful abilities that I learned that took a little bit more thinking and time in which to develop and be recognised. I personally believe that the mental achievements are so much more valuable. During my Outward Bound adventure I learned a lot about myself—I learned to have confidence in myself and others. I learned to put my trust in other people as well as having to trust myself, whether that be facing a personal fear or making a team decision. I learned to believe in myself and I realised that making friends from around the world isn't as scary as it first seemed.

Outward Bound has taught me how to be more resilient than ever, I've learned that plans don't always go the way you want them to so you have to be accepting and flexible. Acceptance is something I've come to terms with extremely well and that all thanks to the Skills for Life Award. Maybe something doesn't work out the way you hoped or you are having a rough day, but I have now learned how to accept and embrace these situations and to make the most of it.

From self-management to making the most of new opportunities, Outward Bound has given me the chance to grow as a person.

GRAEME'S JOURNEY— A LEARNING ADVENTURE

The Queen's Scout Award is the top Youth Award in Scouting. It recognises leadership and teamwork and requires high standards of commitment and motivation. Scouts aged 16–24 must complete a number of achievements over a balance of wide-ranging skills before they turn 25 in order to achieve the award.

Scouts must complete five challenges or obtain a Gold Duke of Edinburgh Award, which include volunteering in the community for 12 months, learning and developing a new skill, taking up a new physical activity, undertake a 3-night expedition in wild country and participate in a 5-day residential. Additionally, Scouts must complete 18 nights away, 12 of which must be camping, and activities that improve the environment, help them to understand the wider world and celebrate the values of Scouting.

To achieve his Queen's Scout Award Graeme took part in a 4-day / 3-night expedition in Iceland, during which he also took part in whale watching and got to relax in thermal pools after long days hiking.

Graeme said:

"Gaining my Queen's Scout Award is an amazing achievement. I have learned so many new skills, met so many new friends and this has boosted my confidence. Scouting has had a huge influence on my life, giving me opportunities that would not have been possible before."

"My expedition to Iceland was an incredible experience, especially hiking in the northern part of the country. At the time of the expedition, I was studying geography at Stirling University so this was an amazing opportunity to get to undertake a project on a glacial flood, known as a jokullhlaup."

"I'll never forget it and I am now planning to take my Scout Group to Iceland so they can experience the beauty of the country."

As well as this, his skill was to learn more about cooking and baking which in part led to a job in the hospitality industry. Graeme is now a volunteer leader, sharing his learning and skills with more young people.

BAQAR'S JOURNEY— OVERCOMING BARRIERS TO SUCCESS

Baqar, 16, suddenly found himself a few years ago transported from Iraq to Scotland, unable to speak any English.

Shy and reserved, he struggled to integrate at school and found communication with his peers and engagement with the curriculum extremely difficult. Consequently, he had few friends and became increasingly isolated both in class and at break times.

Baqar joined The Prince's Trust Achieve programme in school which offers students the chance to try industry taster days, giving them practical experience across different sectors to inspire their career choice. This gave Baqar the opportunity to build up communication and team working skills and to start thinking about what he wanted to do after he left school.

The programme focussed on personal development and at first, Baqar found it difficult to participate. However, a visit to a local technology business, Artronix transformed his progress. At Artronix, he was desperate to get started on the electronics challenge. Not only was he first to finish but he was able to help others in the team who were struggling.

It became clear that Baqar's main barrier to educational success was his language skills so The Trust provided specialist tuition. Baqar really began to shine. He took part in the Achieve programme's enterprise challenge and achieved the top score. At the regional final, he was able to give a presentation in front of a large audience.

Baqar has gained a Prince's Trust qualification, Personal Development and Employability (PDE) qualification at SCQF Level 4. The Achieve course helped him realise his ambition and he is planning to go to college and study to become an electrician.

He says, "Now I can speak to my friends and understand my lessons which I couldn't do before I went to The Prince's Trust."

A BRIEF INTRODUCTION TO CREDIT-RATING AND THE SCQF

The Curriculum for Excellence established an entitlement to recognition of achievements by young people. Some of the awards featured in Amazing Things lead to recognised formal qualifications. A number of others, whilst not resulting in a levelled qualification, are nationally (and indeed internationally) recognised for their curriculum content, approach and outcomes. What they all provide is the opportunity for young people to achieve!

Recognition of achievement of awards can be personal and the impact profound, but awards provide valued evidence of successful completion of a personal learning journey. Many young people are happy simply to gain recognition through an award. Others are increasingly looking to see how these compare to more formal qualifications gained at school or college. The Scottish Credit and Qualifications Framework (SCQF) provides a comparison of the wide range of Scottish qualifications and learning programmes. It covers qualifications from school, college, university, youth awards, apprenticeship and other work-based qualifications. The SCQF helps employers, admissions officers and others to understand qualifications they are not familiar with, the level of difficulty, the amount of learning, and the range of qualifications achieved.

Each qualification or learning programme is given a level and a number of credit points. The level of a qualification indicates the level of difficulty and the number of credit points indicates the length of time it takes to complete. One SCQF credit point represents an average of 10 hours of learning time.

A growing number of youth awards are now credit-rated, offering young people the opportunity to gain a recognised qualification. Examples include ASDAN's Certificates of Personal Effectiveness (CoPE), Sports Leaders UK Awards, Youth Scotland's Youth Achievement Awards and YouthLink Scotland's Participative Democracy Certificate. Such awards can be listed by the SQA alongside other qualifications gained by young people and may also be captured on Insight.

The Table of Awards in Amazing Things records the SCQF levels attributable to credit-rated awards where appropriate. More information, including a searchable database of credit-rated awards can be found at: www.scqf.org.uk.

THE SCOTTISH CREDIT AND QUALIFICATIONS FRAMEWORK

This Framework diagram has been produced to show the mainstream Scottish qualifications already credit rated by SQA and HEIs. However, there are a diverse number of learning programmes on the Framework, which, due to the limitations of the format, cannot be represented here. For more information, please visit the SCQF website at www.scqf.org.uk to view the interactive version of the Framework or search the Database.

AIR TRAINING CORPS (RAF AIR CADETS)

Featured Award:

→ Air Training Corps Award

Aim:

- Promote and encourage a practical interest in aviation and the Royal Air Force among young people
- Provide training which will be useful in the Services and civilian life
- Encourage the spirit of adventure and develop qualities of leadership and good citizenship

Better known as the 'Air Cadets', the UK-wide cadet force is a 'military' uniformed youth organisation with more than 40,000 members aged between 12 and 20 years, supported by c. 16,000 volunteers in over 900 squadrons. Sponsored by the Royal Air Force, it equips young people with skills for careers in the RAF and attitudes and attributes that are highly valued by employers in civilian life.

ARCHAEOLOGY SCOTLAND (AWARDS NETWORK ASSOCIATE MEMBER)

Featured Award:

→ Heritage Hero Awards

Aim:

- To improve self-confidence and wellbeing through engagement with challenging heritage projects
- To inspire young people to develop a lifelong interest in Scotland's past
- To increase awareness of how to access Scotland's heritage in schools, youth groups and similar organisations
- To help foster links between heritage organisations, community groups and young people

Learning forms an integral part of Archaeology Scotland's activities. Our aim is to encourage understanding of, and promote involvement in, Scotland's archaeological heritage for all ages and levels of interest—from formal education to informal learning. We offer learner groups support and information about what archaeology is and how it can be used in delivering learning activities. We have online resources and activity kits available for loan, as well as information bases for teachers and youth workers, information on Young Archaeologists' Club and links to other websites which you may find useful. Archaeology Scotland's Heritage Hero Award scheme for young people in Scotland was launched in January 2017 following an extensive pilot involving schools and youth groups across Scotland.

ARMY CADET FORCE

Featured Award:

→ Army Proficiency Certificate

Aim:

→ To inspire young people to achieve success in life with a spirit of service to the Queen, their Country and their local community, and to develop in them the qualities of a good citizen

With 41,000 cadets (aged 12–18) and 9,500 adults in over 1,600 locations in every corner of the United Kingdom, the ACF is one of the country's largest voluntary youth organisations. It is also one of the oldest, tracing its history back to 1859. We provide progressive cadet training, often of a challenging and exciting nature, to foster confidence, self-reliance, initiative, loyalty and a sense of service to other people.

We encourage the development of personal powers of practical leadership and the ability to work successfully as a member of a team. Some of our activities have a military theme, others have more of a community focus but they all inspire young people to challenge their limits, become more independent, confident and able to step up to any challenge.

BOYS' BRIGADE (THE)

Featured Awards:

- The President's Badge
- The Queen's Badge
- KG VI Youth Leadership Training

Aim:

- To recognise young people's achievements during their time in the Boys' Brigade, developing skills in leadership, communication, outdoor expeditions, working with people and volunteering in the wider community

The Boys' Brigade (BB) is a Christian voluntary uniformed youth organisation founded in Glasgow in 1883, working to develop and support young people from the age of 5–18 years. The Boys' Brigade in Scotland has around 17,000 youth members in 425 groups, across all local authorities. It operates with the support of c. 3,500 adult volunteers.

The BB is committed to seeing lives enriched by supporting children and young people to reach their full potential by providing opportunities to meet together and engage in a range of fun and developmental activities and experiences. We offer a progressive programme of educational and sporting activities, together with residential experiences. There's something for every young person whether it's camping or kayaking, first aid or five a side. Members develop skills, build confidence, make friends, take responsibility and are encouraged to make a real difference in their communities—sharing the values that make us who we are. Programmes are linked to our own age appropriate award schemes and many groups also take part in the Duke of Edinburgh Award scheme.

BRITISH RED CROSS

Featured Award:

- British Red Cross RED Programme

Aim:

- To recognise, empower and develop young people to do something positive for the community

The British Red Cross is a volunteer-led humanitarian organisation that helps people in crisis, wherever and wherever they are. We are part of a global voluntary network, responding to conflicts, natural disasters and individual emergencies. We help vulnerable people in the UK and abroad prepare for, withstand and recover from emergencies in their own communities.

The RED programme is an internal British Red Cross accreditation scheme for all young (15–25 year old) volunteers engaged with the organisation. It is designed to Recognise the hard work and time young volunteers invest; Empower young volunteers by self-assessing the skills, knowledge and competencies they have gained whilst volunteering; and Develop ethical leadership skills.

We also provide a range of educational resources and workshops on First Aid and the impact of stigmatising behaviour towards refugees, migrants and asylum seekers.

DUKE OF EDINBURGH'S AWARD

Featured Awards:

- The Duke of Edinburgh's Award
- The Duke of Edinburgh's Leadership Award

Aim:

- To inspire, guide and support young people in their self-development and recognise their achievements

The Duke of Edinburgh's Award (DofE) is a world leading youth charity which gives all 14–24 year olds the chance to develop skills for life and work. We engage, inspire and empower over 300,000 young people a year across the UK and from every possible background. The Award is delivered by 80 organisations across Scotland, who in turn manage over 900 DofE Groups. These organisations include all Scottish Local Authorities, 40 independent operators and 5 of the larger national voluntary youth organisations.

Our structured programme of volunteering, physical and skills based challenges inspire, guide and support young people to achieve. Young people plan their own programme at Bronze, Silver and Gold levels, building their own individual learning plan. The positive effects of the DofE are proven and far-reaching. Communities are enriched with passionate and driven volunteers; businesses benefit from work ready, competent recruits; and young people are given the confidence to shine.

GIRLGUIDING SCOTLAND

Featured Awards:

- Baden-Powell Challenge Award
- Chief Guide's Challenge
- Queen's Guide Award

Aim:

- To provide a series of challenges that enables girls to develop their own skills whilst contributing to guiding and their local community

We are Scotland's leading charity for girls and young women. We empower c. 50,000 girls in Scotland (400,000 across the UK) to be their best and face the challenges of growing up today. We've been doing that through adventure, friendship and fun for over 100 years. Through our progressive, age-appropriate development programme we build girls' confidence and raise their aspirations. We give them the chance to discover their full potential and encourage them to be a powerful force for good, all while offering girls a space to have fun.

We offer a safe, welcoming girl-only space for girls and young women to try new things, help other people and discover their passions and talents—all while having fun with a group of ready-made friends! We're dedicated to girls leading the way—they choose activities, challenges and events that inspire them, and our volunteers support them to make it happen.

GIRLS' BRIGADE IN SCOTLAND (THE)

Featured Award:

- The Queen's Award

Aim:

- To encourage girls and young women to make a personal commitment to the Lord Jesus Christ while respecting other faiths, and inspire them to make a contribution to the Girls' Brigade and to service in the wider community

The Girls' Brigade in Scotland (GBS) is a lively, vibrant, inclusive organisation for girls and young women. We are a volunteer led uniformed organisation which was founded on Christian principles over 120 years ago but which remain our bedrock today. Open to girls of all faiths or none, and supported by c. 1,500 adult volunteers, we operate through 230 companies serving over 9,000 members in local communities throughout Scotland. All GB companies are affiliated to local churches and are an integral part of both church and local community.

Girls' Brigade in Scotland offers girls and young women of all ages the opportunity to discover new skills, enjoy new experiences, make new friends and have fun in a supportive, nurturing environment. Adult leaders have been trained to help the young people in their care to reach their full potential through a programme of age appropriate informal learning, the pinnacle of which is achievement of the Queen's Badge.

GLASGOW KELVIN COLLEGE (AWARDS NETWORK ASSOCIATE MEMBER)

Featured Award:

→ Community Achievement Awards

Aim:

→ To support, recognise and accredit learning and achievement in a community setting

The Community Achievement Awards are context-independent and designed to support, recognise and accredit learning and achievement in a community setting. They are designed for delivery by partners in liaison with Glasgow Kelvin College, with submissions assessed by the College's CLD team.

The Community Achievement Awards framework provides formal recognition and additional personal value to volunteering, community based and social justice based projects, recognising the impact of collective efforts in supporting community based organisations and groups and supporting people in development of their personal and group capacity.

These Awards provide people supporting their communities with the opportunity to progress with their own journey and also the space to encourage others around them into a learning or personal development capacity. The Awards at SCQF level 4 support initial engagement with community activities, at SCQF levels 5 and 6 provide an effective support and supervision framework for volunteers and at SCQF level 7 support community engagement with service design.

JOHN MUIR TRUST (THE)

Featured Award:

→ The John Muir Award

Aim:

→ Encourages people to connect with, enjoy and care for wild places

The John Muir Trust is a UK-wide conservation charity dedicated to protecting and enhancing wild places. The Trust takes its name from John Muir (1838–1914), the pioneering, influential Scots-born American conservationist who was passionate about the wild. His message—that we all need to experience, enjoy and care for wild places—is as relevant today as it ever was.

The John Muir Award is the only award to focus on the natural environment and wild places, encouraging first hand experiences for individuals, groups or families —non-competitive, challenging and progressive. To achieve a John Muir Award, each participant meets four Challenges; Discover, Explore, Conserve, Share; completes the required time commitment; shows enthusiasm and commitment towards their involvement; has an awareness of John Muir; and understands what the John Muir Award is and why they are participating. There are three levels of the John Muir Award that encourage a progressive involvement.

BOUND TRUST

OUTWARD BOUND TRUST (THE)

Featured Award:

The Outward Bound Skills for Life Award

Aim:

→ To prepare young people for their future by equipping them with skills for life through the power of learning and adventure in the wild

Established in 1941, The Outward Bound Trust is a charity that lives and breathes outdoor education, it's in their DNA. From the moment participants arrive at centres they're immersed in spectacular scenery and introduced to a world of new experiences. From rowing across lakes and camping in the wild, to lighting fires and building shelters, Outward Bound® empowers young people to conquer mountains—both real and metaphorical.

The Trust's Skills for Life Award is the flagship programme in which they deliver this. Attracting young people from across the country and around the world, participants are invited to step outside of their comfort zones for 19 days to have a real adventure. What's more is that the Award's outcomes have been specifically developed to give participants the clarity to realise their ambitions and achieve their life goals. Whether it's college, university, an apprenticeship or something else entirely this Award will help get you there.

"It was the best three weeks I've ever experienced and has changed me as a person as well as given me lifelong friends in the process" Honor: Skills for Life Award participant summer 2017

PLAYBACK ICE

Featured Award:

→ Moving On—Transition in Action Award

Aim:

→ To support the development of children and young people's wellbeing and essential skills in order for them to be better prepared for learning, life and work, engaged citizens, lifelong responsible learners, who are self-aware, caring and connected to others

Playback ICE awards aim to support learners to develop a range of skills and qualities so that they are more prepared to lead a healthy, safe, fulfilling and responsible life. Award units respond to the current priorities of government in relation to the National Improvement Framework, Developing Scotland's Young Workforce and Health and Wellbeing—developing skills for learning, life and work. Learners will feel and be: Included—Connected—Engaged—Achieving—Planning—Progressing.

Playback ICE was established in 2000 from an identified set of needs, voiced by children and young people to be included as active members of society with equal opportunities. Our purpose from then has been to support inclusion, citizenship and equality agendas and help transform the lives of children and young people no matter their starting point or experience in life.

Prince's Trust
Scotland

PRINCE'S TRUST (THE)

Featured Award:

→ Achieve Programme

Aim:

→ To help disadvantaged young people to change their lives and get into work, education, training or volunteering

The Prince's Trust helps disadvantaged young people to get their lives on track. Many of the young people helped by The Trust are in or leaving care, facing issues such as homelessness or mental health problems, or have been in trouble with the law.

Our programmes help young people at risk of exclusion to stay in school and continue to learn; they develop the confidence and motivation of the unemployed to turn their lives around; and they support young people to develop their skills to find work or start their own business.

Our education programme Achieve is a personal development course for 13–19 year-olds who are at risk of underachievement or exclusion. This course offers a practical approach to learning to help them fulfil their potential.

SEA CADETS

Featured Award:

→ Sea Cadets Programme

Aim:

→ To give young people the best possible head start in life through nautical adventure and fun based on the customs and traditions of the Royal Navy

Whether at sea or on land, the Sea Cadets offers young people across the UK amazing opportunities for personal development by learning new skills and working in teams.

We offer an environment where young people find new confidence and inspiration. Today, 14,000 young people based in 400 units in towns, cities and ports across the UK are challenging themselves and developing new skills, like sailing, boating and rock climbing—supported by 9,000 volunteers.

The Sea Cadets Pathway develops life skills; instills participants with key values; and leads to internally and externally recognised qualifications, equipping young people for life and work.

SCOUTS SCOTLAND

Featured Awards:

- Queen's Scout Award
- Chief Scout's Awards – Gold, Platinum, Diamond
- Explorer Scout Young Leader Scheme

Aim:

- Scouting exists to actively engage and support young people in their personal development, empowering them to make a positive contribution to society

Scouting is the largest co-educational uniformed youth organisation in Scotland, with c. 39,000 young people supported by over 11,000 adult volunteers (part of the 640,000 scout members across the UK and 31 million worldwide).

Scouting exists to actively engage and support young people in their personal development, empowering them to make a positive contribution to society. Scouting takes place when young people, in partnership with adults, work together based on the values of Scouting and: enjoy what they are doing and have fun; take part in activities indoors and outdoors; learn by doing; share in spiritual reflection; take responsibility and make choices; undertake new and challenging activities; make and live by their Promise.

Scouts Scotland provides a progressive non-formal age appropriate curriculum for young people aged 6–25, culminating in the prestigious Queen's Scout Award.

SKILLFORCE

Featured Award:

- Junior Prince's Award

Aim:

- To empower children and young people to make positive choices and feel 'comfortable in their own skin'

SkillForce is a national education charity. Our mission is to empower children and young people to make positive choices and feel 'comfortable in their own skin', building confidence, resilience and good character using the skills and experience of ex-Services personnel. We provide a range of innovative award programmes delivered by predominately ex-Services personnel to children and young people aged 5–19. Programmes are delivered within schools and other settings.

SkillForce believes that a clear set of positive moral values is essential to young people developing a strong sense of self. We particularly value courage, respect, integrity, honesty, kindness and compassion. These moral values will help us to support the young people, our staff and our stakeholders to make positive choices and dare to be their best selves.

SPORTS LEADERS UK

Featured Award:

→ Sports Leadership Award

Aim:

→ To ensure the UK's future generations are equipped with leadership skills for life

Sports Leaders UK is an independent social enterprise, reaching out to young people throughout society through applied, practical learning. Through awards and qualifications, we create a fun and dynamic focus, with essential health, employment and social benefits.

Sports Leaders UK awards and qualifications equip young people with employability skills for life improving motivation, self-esteem, communication, team work and confidence. Leadership volunteering is a vital part of all our courses allowing young people to practice and build their skills in order to 'Give More. Become More.' to improve employability. All of the awards and qualifications are practical—learners learn by doing rather than through written work. There are no exams—assessment is made upon a learner's ability to lead and demonstrate their leadership skills for a certain period of time, within a specific setting. Delivery of some awards requires organisations to register as a Qualification Centre—see website for details.

SQA (SCOTTISH QUALIFICATIONS AUTHORITY)

Featured Awards:

Wider Achievement—

- SQA Employability Award
- SQA Leadership Awards
- SQA Personal Development Awards
- SQA Volunteering Skills Awards

Aim:

→ To help young people develop knowledge and skills through experience and activity, preparing them for the world of work with accredited qualifications

SQA helps people to realise their potential and to achieve their ambitions by providing a wide range of high quality, internationally recognised qualifications and associated services. SQA has a wide range of Awards which are designed to recognise wider achievement. These Awards recognise the life and work skills that learners gain from activities they may already be taking part in at school, at college, youth organisations or elsewhere—such as sport, mentoring, voluntary work or fund-raising activities.

SQA's Wider Achievement qualifications are designed to be flexible and can capture achievement in smaller chunks of learning. They are divided into units which can be taken and certificated by themselves or grouped together. There is no external assessment and the qualifications are ungraded. All achievements are recorded on the nationally recognised Scottish Qualification Certificate.

VOLUNTARY ACTION SCOTLAND (VAS)

Featured Award:

→ The Saltire Award

Aim:

→ Celebrating and recognising the volunteering achievements of young people in Scotland

Saltire Awards is the Scottish Government's national youth volunteer awards. They celebrate and recognise the commitment, contribution and achievements of young volunteers in Scotland, aged between 12 and 25.

Young people gain nationally recognised certificates, signed by Scottish Government Ministers, for the different amounts of volunteering they do. Certificates are available for 10, 25, 50, 100, 200 and 500 hours of volunteering activity—plus 'outstanding achievement'. They can recognise both volunteering that a young person does with a local community, good cause or via school or youth group; AND volunteering that a young person does as part of another youth award which has a volunteering element.

Saltire Awards is delivered in each local authority area by the local Third Sector Interface (TSI); they provide support and assistance on achieving and accessing the Saltire Awards.

The Saltire Awards is coordinated at a national level by Voluntary Action Scotland.

YOUNG SCOT

Featured Award:

→ Annual Young Scot Awards

Aim:

→ To recognise the achievements of young people who are outstanding, inspirational or benefit their community, helping to promote a more positive perception of young people in Scotland

Young Scot is the national youth information and citizenship charity. We provide young people, aged 11–26, with a mixture of information, ideas and incentives to help them become confident, informed and active citizens. We understand that every young person is different and provide a universal service which meets their ever-changing needs.

Since its launch in 2006, the Sunday Mail Young Scot Awards has celebrated the inspirational contributions of thousands of young Scots who have made a real difference to communities across Scotland. These annual nominated awards cover a wide spectrum of activity categories and recognise the amazing achievements of some of Scotland's truly remarkable young people. They shine a light on the positive contributions young people make every day and provide a fantastic opportunity to see their efforts and dedication celebrated.

YOUTH SCOTLAND

Featured Awards:

→ Dynamic Youth Awards

→ Youth Achievement Awards

Aim:

→ To support young people to achieve their full potential

Youth Scotland is Scotland's national charity for the support and delivery of community based youth work, providing quality youth work programmes, accredited non-formal learning awards, information, resources and training. It is the largest youth organisation in Scotland, serving a membership of over 64,000 young people and 7,600 youth workers (including 5,000 volunteers) in 1,100 local groups.

Its Dynamic Youth Awards and Youth Achievement Awards recognise and accredit young people's non-formal learning and achievements and are delivered in a range of settings through a growing number of Operating Agencies (including local authorities, voluntary agencies, colleges and schools) and by participating units (including youth groups, volunteer centres, youth councils and schools). Dynamic Youth Awards offer a progression route to Youth Achievement Awards, which at Bronze, Silver, Gold and Platinum levels provide an open framework that providers can mould to fit their existing programmes.

YOUTHBANK SCOTLAND

Featured Awards:

- Decision-making Skills
- Developing Leadership Skills
- Introduction to Young People's Grant Making Skills Level 1 / 2
- Young People's Grant Making

Aim:

- Involve, Invest, Inspire young people through grant making and empowerment initiatives nationally with local impact

YouthBank Scotland is an innovative grant making and empowerment initiative run by young people for young people. YouthBank Scotland builds on young people's skills and experiences to enable them to give cash for action, funding young people's ideas for the benefit of the wider community. Through support for local YouthBanks, provision of training for young people and those who engage young people, YouthBank Scotland's mission is to:

- Involve young people in decision making and grant making.
- Invest in young people's potential and their ideas.
- Inspire others to do the same.

YouthBank Scotland's training programmes are based on strategic and practical knowledge of youth participation and engaging young people as financial decision makers and organisational leaders developed over 15 years across the UK. Our training enables young people to play active leadership roles in their communities. YBS can offer both nationally accredited training on decision-making, leadership and grant-making skills; and non-accredited training on fundraising, team building and involving young people.

YOUTHLINK SCOTLAND

Featured Award:

- Participative Democracy Certificate

Aim:

- To give young people the opportunity to develop their active participation, citizenship and social capital

YouthLink Scotland is the national agency for youth work. It is a membership organisation and is in the unique position of representing the interests and aspirations of the whole of the sector both voluntary and statutory. It champions the role and value of the youth work sector, challenging government at national and local levels to invest in the development of the sector.

YouthLink Scotland's Participative Democracy Certificate (PDC) is an award that provides accreditation to young people actively involved in decision-making in groups. It gives participants the opportunity to acknowledge and develop communication, decision-making and participation in the context of democratic engagement. It fits in nicely with Pupil Councils, where supported by the youth work and CLD sector, Youth Councils, Youth Forums, young people making a difference on a local, national and global scale or involved in developing their group or organisations programmes.
