

How does the narrator feel before her move to England?

In the end, do you think the narrator likes living in England?

What do you think makes a place a home?