

The author's voice

Explain that some authors like to chat to their readers, whereas others prefer just to say what happened.

Encourage children to reflect on this as they read and decide how this author wanted to approach the reader.

Using the PCM, children complete the table to plan their own myth. Encourage children to think carefully about each element of the myth and how they relate to each other.

Follow-up: children create a poster to show other children the key features of myths and legends.
