6. Currently teachers plan a 3 or 4 week block of homework, giving families some flexibility to allow for (0 other learning and social experiences outside school, to help parents juggle work commitments and point) to ensure you can build family time in at a time to suit your household. The exception to this is P.1, where WEEKLY homework is necessary to link with current learning.

Please rate the following statements to share your opinion about regular homework. Please be honest - there is no 'right' answer.

I believe that homework should be kept to a minimum.

1	anonymous	I feel that the online doesn't work for working parents and having it printed would be better for grandparents to help out with homework
2	anonymous	I think homework should all be given home on paper at start of the week and have full week to complete it . E learning doesnt suit everyone
3	anonymous	I appreciate the reasons behind the new online homework however would like some paper tasks given each week. Definitely easier and more efficient for kids than online
4	anonymous	I think children do enough at school and at home learning life skills! And as a working parent who sometimes doesn't get home until 7 I do not want to spend the only hour at night with my children stressing over homework. So in my house hold we don't do home work we spend time as a family for the little time we have together at night.
5	anonymous	My personal preference would be for my child to have worksheets sent home, once or twice a week- completed and handed in on a Friday. I feel that online learning is not for me as I forget and lose track of it. So I have been doing bits at home myself in a booklet as my daughter prefers this
6	anonymous	Parents should have been asked if they would like homework packs home not every child in the school has laptops tablets and phones having a child miss out on learning opportunities because they don't have these items is ridiculous. The school is a complete disgrace the past 2 years
7	anonymous	Homework is a big issue for us. We regularly completed the online learning during lockdown but I struggle with it. I feel paper homework daily or weekly would really be useful for parents especially with kids in junior school. As a working mum I find it difficult to access the laptop to get the learning off. I know it's easier for older kids who don't rely on parents to log in but I personally would find it easier for print outs to work with. At the moment we only do reading books, spelling and some number work

8	anonymous	Think children should be given a print out incase they don't have a tablet or phone to access homework & incase they cant get access because its playing up or internets down or they haven't charged there tablet to make life easier if they have a copy in there bag no matter if there at grandparents house they can always do it there
9	anonymous	i found using the paper homework was more effective
10	anonymous	The homework grids arent that useful as it expects the parents/carers to make up work for homework & try & decide the format. Homeworks sheets are more beneficial as the kids can work through them in the formats that they are being taught. Even if the kids can copy the homeworks sheets as I appreciate some families cant print.
11	anonymous	I know where to find homework etc but do prefer jitters and worksheets being sent home it's easier for us to find time to do this due to child care etc
12	anonymous	I personally liked the homework grid we had before. It was super easy to follow and to access. Plus I felt it meant I could see what work my child was currently following in class.
13	anonymous	I think the kids do more than enough work in scho and when they come home it should be there choice what they are wanting to do because I know in this house homework can be very stressful and I don't want that for my child.
14	anonymous	I believe a more structured homework grid would benefit more. ie maths, spelling, phonics sheets to complete, to make homework easier to work with and parents not having to work it out 1st. Like previous years.
15	anonymous	More information about their homework could be beneficial too, sometimes parents are relying on their kids to tell them what has to be done. P1 kids just get sheets home, sometimes with not a lot on it and I'd like to make sure they're doing it correctly and the way they're learning it in school so there is no confusion and especially frustration which has happened a few times.
16	anonymous	Homework should be scrapped.
17	anonymous	I would like a parents night type of thing that goes over with parents, how to get the most out of teams, how to get notifications of when new task/homework/school event pictures are up loaded and the best way to contact teachers through teams.

18	anonymous	I do believe homework is very important for pupils my only issue is online as am not great with technology and some people don't have access to computers a think paper homework should be optional. Homework should also be simple for a child to understand what they are doing on many occasions my kids have came to me not understanding what it means.
19	anonymous	I agree homework is important however I plan other learning/life experiences and do not complete homework every night with the children the will do homework/reading book between 1 and 3 nights a week depending on other plans and what the homework is for that week. I think the school having the flexible homework grids helps with this.
20	anonymous	Preferred the 'old' homework coming home in a jotter on a Monday and returning on a Friday option.
