Dear National Trust Members,

I am writing this letter to urge you to stop letting people hunt on National Trust land.

Firstly the British population voted against fox hunting in 2002 and that's how the hunting act started. 70 to 80% of the public still support this act. The hunters use it as a sport but it's actually cruelty to animals, disgusting and it is a disgrace. Foxes are bred and killed violently and instead of the one quick bite in the neck as hunters claim the foxes are actually killed from trauma which is inflicted by multiple dog bites. This is exactly why fox hunting should not continue.

Next hunting is not natural anymore. Years ago the public outlawed bear baiting, but fighting and dog fighting. No one has gone against this. Foxes are not different. Every animal has the right to live the same as we have the right to live. Killing the foxes is an utter disgrace and must be stopped immediately!

Furthermore all the hunters claim that it keeps the fox population lower. In fact that is a lie. Hunters breed foxes only so they can kill them. It makes no difference to the population and only makes the sport more disgusting. This defeats the argument. Trail hunting is just a cover up for fox hunting and it just helps them get away with it. This has to be stopped now!

In conclusion not only are they hunting foxes but they are killing them and breeding them for fun. Hunters claim that they die fast but in reality they are attacked very viciously. I am positive that after this you agree that we must stop this cruelty now!

Sincerely,
Isabella Masterton
