The Learning Journey

Broad General Education provides your child with a wide range of knowledge, skills and exciting experiences that they can draw on as their lives, careers and job opportunities continue to change.

Curricular Areas in the broad general education are planned around a nationally agreed programme of experiences and outcomes (often called Es and Os). These describe the knowledge, skills, attributes and capabilities that young people are expected to develop.

Learning in the broad general education may often span a number of curriculum areas (for example a literacy project planned around science and technology might include outdoor learning experiences, research and the use of ICT). There is likely to be themed and project learning, as well as wider opportunities to show how skills and knowledge can be used in challenging, different and interesting ways. The term often used for this is interdisciplinary learning.

Play Pedagogy

For most children, learning in Primary 1 will feel very familiar as Play Pedagogy and Outdoor Learning are parts of daily life for our infant pupils just as it is in Nursery.

Children will not sit at a desk all day but move around the flexible learning space within our P1 environment. There will be some timetabling of curricular areas to ensure that all pupils have a wide a range of planned learning experiences in a wide range of environments both indoors and outdoors.

Play is important for the early stages of brain development and playing with your child can help build relationships for later life. But no matter what age we are, play helps to develop important skills for learning, life and work. Encouraging play is one of the best things you can do for your child, whatever their age, and it's free!

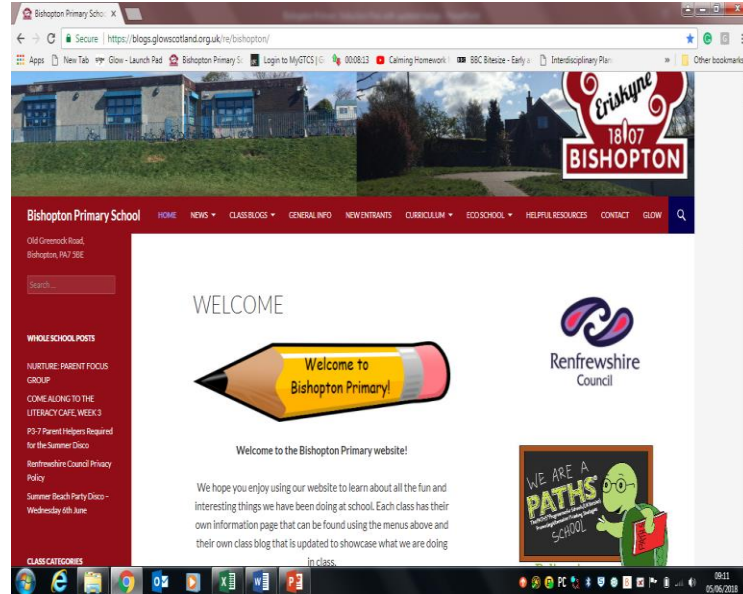

COVID 19 – Movement between classes and environments may be restricted due current guidelines.

Holiday Homework

Children and young people have a right to play. The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child states (in Article 31) that every child should have:

... the right to rest and leisure, to engage in play and recreational activities appropriate to the age of the child and to participate freely in cultural life and the arts.

United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child

There is lots of information available about the health and wellbeing benefits of play. Active play helps to build strong bones and muscles. Children and young people explore their feelings through play, and this can help them build resilience and cope with stress.

Play is how young children make sense of the world. There is also evidence to show that play in early childhood can influence the way your child's brain develops, helping to co-ordinate their mental and physical capabilities. Through play, children and young people of all ages develop problem-solving skills, imagination and creativity, language and observation skills, and memory and concentration. Children and young people use play to test their theories about the world and their place in it.

"Play creates a brain that has increased flexibility and improved potential for learning later in life."

Children are also welcome to bring a packed lunch if that is their preference.
