So we chased him. He was half our size but it was hard work trying to catch up. When he heard us coming closer he veered left off the drive and started running through the grass, zigzagging round bushes and dodging under the big umbrella plants.

'Archie! Come back! You'll get lost,' I called.

He was out of sight now. Kevin and I ran in the direction he'd taken. The grounds were so overgrown it was as if we were in an enchanted wood in a fairy tale. There were so many trees the sky was blotted out and it was as dark as night. The trees were old, with long, twisting roots tunnelling in and out of the earth. There were nettle everywhere - I could feel them stinging my legs as my nightie caught on brambles.

'Archie, come back?' I called.

Then we heard him yell.

'Oh, flip, what's he done now?' said Kevin.

We ran harder. The trees thinned and we came to a clearing - and there was Archie, capering on the grass beside a vast stretch of water.

'It's the sea!' he screamed excitedly. 'I've run away to the sea.'

'The sea?' said Kevin. 'Crikey, look at it!'

I looked and saw a glittering green oval, with rushes growing all around. 'It's not the sea, it's a lake,' I said.

'It is so the sea. Lakes are little, not massive like this. My dad took me to a boating lake and it was only big enough for toy boats, not real ones. This is definitely the sea,' said Kevin.
