

In March 2018, a new law was introduced in Scotland to provide communication equipment and support in using that equipment. This means every person in Scotland who has been assessed by a Speech and Language Therapist and identified as requiring an AAC device will be issued with the equipment and support required to use it.

Have your Say

We would like to invite AAC users, their carers, and their families from across Scotland to join in individual or group discussions.

This will allow us to hear directly of your lived experiences and help identify how the introduction of this law is making a difference.
