

Pupil Workshop with Neil MacKay:

“Learning how to learn”

How to wake up in the morning and remember what you learnt the night before!

Venue: Alloway Primary School

Date: Wednesday the 17th May 2017 from 7pm-9pm (tea/ coffee break included)

South Ayrshire Council is delighted to host an evening workshop with Neil MacKay. Neil is one of the world's foremost thinkers on dyslexia and author of the acclaimed resource book “Removing Dyslexia as a Barrier to Achievement” and “Taking the hell out of homework”. He is an experienced teacher who has taught for 26 years, working with children with a wide range of ages, needs and ability. His audiences particularly appreciate his ability to offer workable responses to a range of learning needs without affecting the work of the rest of the class. Neil is also the creator of Britain's Dyslexia Friendly Schools concept and it was with Neil's guidance and support that South Ayrshire's Dyslexia Friendly Schools approach was launched in 2010. Neil has recently been involved with South Ayrshire's relaunch of Inclusive Practice and Dyslexia Friendly Schools which will formally take place in August 2017.

This workshop will focus on typical homework tasks that are built around Neil's book "Taking the hell out of homework". The workshop will show pupils how to learn spellings, deal with comprehensions, prepare material to learn for tests and get ideas down on paper.

It is anticipated that the workshop will be very interactive in style and will allow opportunities for the modelling of a number of useful approaches and strategies to be used both in school and at home.

This workshop is open to all pupils who experience literacy barriers to their learning from the ages 11 years – 15 years.

[Parents/ carers are welcome to remain at the venue for the duration of the workshop; however the workshop is specifically designed for young learners in mind. The workshop will be supervised by a number of teaching and support staff from across the authority]
