We really enjoy our google meet sessions, find the staff make them exciting and fun and my son is kept interested.

Thought it was great and beneficial having the suggested activities as it gave us ideas of what we could do. It was nice to get to know the nursery teachers in a more personal way aswell. Thought google meets was done very well and all children were given the chance to participate. The games and songs were really good.

The effort of the teachers updating the learning journals daily was greatly appreciated, it was useful and also provided guidance to us as parents on what stages and activities we should focus on. It was also nice for the children to see their teachers and friends.

He enjoys the staff videos and Google meets as he is able to see his teachers and his friends and listen to the stories and songs like he would if he was in nursery.

It can be difficult for parents who are also working from home full time to do all of the activities but we have tried to do a lot of the tasks suggested.

The google meets were great, interactive and fun despite the circumstance.

We want the return to nursery after this lengthy period of absence to be as easy for the children as possible. Do you have any suggestions which you would like to offer to aid this smooth transition.

Personally my child is more than ready to go back, no need for aid in smooth transition.

The video that is on Learning Journals is a brilliant idea.

I think if we have conversations with children before we go back - even perhaps trying to get back into nursery routine - washing hands regularly, same timing of snack times and any

I think my son will be running in the door, as he has missed his friends, teachers and the routine of his nursery. You all do a great job.
