Comments from families included:

All of the suggestions above are valuable. It depends on the resources available to explore them. If all on the list can be explored that's fantastic, if not I have indicated those I feel are most important

There is no mention of numeracy

I feel it's really important to support young people with asn and for others to be aware and recognise that everyone is different.

There was a lot of family learning already based around using a screen. I would like to see things that encourage more parent child interaction or outdoor/creative things in family learning as opposed to more screen time

I think recognising and supporting children in terms of additional support needs, support for learning in curricular areas and identifying and supporting mental health will be very important as we move forward from the last 18 months. I'm pleased to see these listed as priorities for the school.

I think that supporting pupils on an individual basis after losing 2 terms with regards to school year 2019/20 and 2020/21 should be utmost priority

Even though the children are very supportive and friendly to everyone there is always space for more ☺ more outside learning I think would benefit the children, because of the last year we have had not really being allowed to mix with others and mixing with nature is always a good thing. Let's teach our little people to look after our planet for years to come and make it better not worse.

ASN is very important to us, to allow children to be fully aware that peers may need their support. Furthermore, that the school fully supports parents who have children with ASN. Individual targeted support for those children that need some extra help, more so whose children's learning isn't supported at home. Children should always be encouraged to communicate, in confidence and know that it is safe to do so within their school environment
